

PHOTOWALK
Safdarjung Tomb, Delhi
13 January 2019
Brief Report

Photobug members organized a photowalk to Safdarjung tomb in New Delhi on 13th January, 2019. The twin theme of the photowalk was heritage photography and fashion photography.

Safdarjung tomb is a sandstone and marble mausoleum in Delhi, India. It was built in 1754 in the late Mughal Empire style for Nawab Safdarjung. The monument has an ambience of spaciousness and an imposing presence with its domed and arched red brown and white coloured structures. The truly magnificent architecture of the tomb and the well maintained lawns provide a perfect set up for all photo-enthusiasts.

Members gathered at the tomb at 8:00 am in the morning. Seven students of fashion society volunteered to pose as models. It was an interesting blend of photography, modern fashion being shot in the background of a medieval Mughal structure. Photobug members also went around the tomb capturing its architectural beauty. The day was well utilized by all the members who clicked plenty of pics and improved their photography skills. The senior members of the society ably guided and mentored the juniors.

A total of thirteen photobug members participated in this activity. The photowalk concluded at 12:00 pm.
