

SUCCOUR DURING COVID 19 PANDEMIC

The COVID-19 pandemic has magnified the injustices of our world. Through project Sanrakshan, we are engaging in an impressive act of community service by providing employment opportunities to rural tailors. The market for these small tailors was frozen and the only source of their bread earnings came to an end due to lockdown. The tailors were very eager to collaborate with us when we informed them about our plan. Radium collars manufacturing contributed a balanced amount of job opportunities to these craftsmen. Project Sanrakshan provided employment opportunities to as many as 30 small tailors in these tough times.

The project Sanrakshan has done what others failed to do. Though a small step still these orders for radium collars have given livelihood to those tailors who were out of work for more than a year. We are doing our best to engage more and more people through project Sanrakshan to help them grow and lead a stable life. We are also providing employment opportunities to rural women to create gender equality in fields of employment and to give them independent identity that will be of great use in fighting the problems of domestic violence and abuse.

Our project is diverse from usual work in which small tailors are engaged which is mostly seasonal whether it's weddings or festivals but the drives for radium collars keep ongoing throughout the year. With more people sponsoring our project and engaging with this cause the tailors were getting more work.

We hope to take this initiative to new heights and benefit as many people as we can. Our volunteers took matters into their own hands and ensured that every dog around them was safe against accidents by making them radium collars. We want to work for the betterment of small tailors and artisans as well as our four paw companions. Every tiny effort of every member creates a huge impact on society and our initiative to provide a healthy and safer life to the voiceless. Our volunteers within their respective areas like Ayodhya, Haryana, Bihar and many more places helped secure stray dogs against road mishaps by making them wear radium collars during the lockdown.
