Best Practices

Planning & Implementation of Collaborative Projects (PIC)

Planning & Implementation of Collaborative Projects (PIC) allows for a pedagogical insistence upon collaborative group work between teachers and students, thus bringing both the stakeholders together within the college's inclusive practice model that focuses on the development of personal skills through extra-curricular activities. Some examples of such practices are as under:

The students organised the annual festival Surlok yet again where they did the following:

1. Brought sponsors for the event
2. Managed the entire event
3. Advertised the event through brochures, posters, banners, social media like Facebook and YouTube
4. Covered the entire event through Photobug, the photography society of the college, in both still and video format.

Apart from Surlok students also organised the Annual Sports Day at Tyagraj Stadium, where they excelled in doing the following things:

1. Invited the Chief Guests
2. Advertised the event through brochures, posters, banners, and social media like the Facebook.
3. Devised the itinerary of entire show and managed all the games wherein both the students and teachers participated with enthusiasm.

A major challenge faced while organising such events was related to time constraints. Student found it a bit difficult to balance between academic and co-curricular activities.
